

Shaking Your Baby - Is Just Not the Deal!

Parent Education Resource Materials Order Form

Babies need parents, family members and carers who can provide a safe, comfortable and nurturing environment. Caring for a baby when there are other family and personal stressors increases the risk that a baby's needs may become overwhelming to the person caring for them. If these situations are coupled with periods of crying the risk of shaking is also increased.

This 3 ½ minute video has been produced to provide information to parents, carers and professionals about responding to a crying baby. Its goal is to ensure that all those involved with babies understand the importance of not shaking a baby, ever. It is a 3.5 minute animated video and has been translated into several languages. It is suitable for use by parent educators, in schools, in hospitals, doctor's surgeries, in child care centres and for personal use by parents and carers wanting to educate babysitters, family friends and young people. Pamphlets and posters are also available to supplement the video and a training manual is available on request for use by educators.
